Lemon Grove Review

TO MAKE LEMON GROVE GROW TRADE AT HOME

Vol. 3; No. 3 — LEMON GROVE, CALIFORNIA, THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 14, 1950 — 5c Per Copy

Local Schools Jammed With Pupils

The Lemon Grove Schools opened Monday, both public and parochial, and everyone of them is crowded to capacity with pupils.

The Lemon Grove, Monterey Heights and Vista La Mesa are on half day sessions.

St. John of the Cross, even with enlarged quarters, is unable to care for all applicants for entrance.

Registration figures for the schools are not complete up to the hour this paper went to press, but registration in the Lemon Grove School District will exceed expectations of 1800 pupils.

Reception for Teachers

Last Thursday evening, the District Teachers Association gave a nicely planned reception for all new members of the school personnel at the Lemon Grove Community Center. The guest list of approximately 125 persons included board members, administrators, teachers and members of the secretarial and custodian staffs.

The gracious reception line included Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Herder, Mr. and Mrs. V. J. Dorman, Mr. and Mrs. Byron Netzley, Mr. and Mrs. S. K. Solleder, Mr. and Mrs. Ben Schei, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Thomas, Mrs. Hazel Schwalm and Mrs. Evelyn Lauritzen.

R. T. Purvis sang "My Task" and "Roamin' in the Gloamin'" to open the evening's program. Two trumpet solos, "Jupitor" and "America," were given by Mrs. Ella F. Bengston. Mrs. Virginia Cornelius gave a humorous reading, "How to Get Along as a teacher"; and Mrs. Ada Krimsky sang "My Arcady," "One Kiss" and "My Hero." Dancing followed the program.

Refreshments were served from a beautifully appointed table, sparkling with crystal and silver, and made colorful with huge blooms.

Mrs. Hazel Jensen, chairman of the social committee, was ably assisted at the reception by her committee members, Mrs. Grace Burks, Mrs. Dorothy Roberts, Paul Cheatham and Fabian Egan. Mrs. Marian Batchelder, of Lemon Grove, kindly offered her assistance to the committee members, who wish to thank her for her efforts.

Hi, Neighbor

by Mae Rex Graham

The Review editors would like to print news of local men who are serving in the Armed Forces. Please mail, phone H 6-1168 or bring news of your men who are in service or being called.

Since hospitals cannot send out lists of births, it is rather difficult to get that news. If you have a new baby in your home won't you please tell us about it.

Wedding news is always interesting, also anniversaries and parties. When there is a death in the family, it is always respectful to the one passed on to have a story of his life.

Churches, clubs and other organizations have been informed that publicity in the Review is welcome and free, so if it doesn't appear there, ask your publicity chairman about it.

Comings and goings of friends and relatives may seem trivial but it is a nice courtesy to your guests to have them in the news.

It takes many departments and kinds of news to make a good newspaper. It makes no difference who you are—if you live in this vicinity your news would have preference in the Review over that of the governor, the President or any other prominent person, unless they came to Lemon Grove which would be news.

The Review is printed for Lemon Grove and vicinity and does not attempt to give the coverage of a daily newspaper.

The Review is printed on Thursday with one press run made on Wednesday. Get your news in as early as possible and the publishers will be eternally grateful for that will prevent their having to work late hours.

Thanks to all you Hi Neighbors for your news, your subscriptions and your many courtesies.

Prop. 1 Would Boost Tax Rate

Taxes on homes in San Diego County would be increased $1.70 on each $100 valuation if Proposition 1 is approved November 7, states County Supervisor Frank A. Gibson.

The proposal, which would eliminate personal property taxes in California, would create a "serious situation," according to Gibson. It would hurt tenants as well as home owners, he explained, because real property taxes would increase, forcing landlords to raise rents.

Removal of the personal property levy would eliminate 21 percent, of local government's property tax base, the assessor's office reported.

In San Diego County alone, the school, city and county budgets would lose 10 million dollars, the office estimated. This would include revenue lost from personal property, in-lieu tax money and "other subventions from the state."

A meeting was held Tuesday in the San Diego Chamber of Commerce auditorium to organize a citizens' committee against the proposition. Leaders from all areas of the county were present.

Collection Difficult

Because the proposition specifies no date for its operation to become effective, if passed, it would begin to operate five days after the secretary of state certifies the vote. Collection of personal property taxes on the November tax bills would be virtually impossible, the county's legal counsel agreed.

Chairman James A. Robbins, of the Board of Supervisors, concurred with Assessor Crowell D. Eddy's warning.

Possible effects of a missing personal property tax, Eddy had said, would be a 27 percent. tax increase on real property or a 9 cent retail sales tax, instead of the present 3½c levy.

"Either would be disastrous to the property owner or the tourist trade," Robbins said.

Business leaders and numerous officials in the Civic Center asserted Proposition 1 is "an appealing but misleading measure," and explained that the meeting Tuesday was called so that a warning campaign could be started.

The new Teenage group, which is to be known as the Normel Evorg Teenagers, enjoyed a wienie roast at Community Center Saturday evening. Movies and dancing were also enjoyed.

Printing Played Important Role in California's Development

By ALLERTON H. JEFFRIES

Back in 1834 a printing press doubtless a variation on the Washington Hand Press model, was hoisted aboard a square-rigger lying in Boston Harbor.

The ship sailed. It rounded The Horn. It came finally to the shores of California. The press was unloaded and claimed by its new owner, Don Augustin V. Zamorano.

That press symbolizes the most powerful agent ever to impinge upon our own great State as an entity, for upon that day of unloading there descended upon California a full-formed but ungrown embryo which has since blossomed into a multi-million-dollar industry supporting thousands of citizens.

Don Augustin was a Mexican Army officer who landed at there. In addition to being a military man, Don Augustin was also learned in the art of printing. Wisely he linked printing with his official position of the moment—as executive secretary of the Territory of Alta California, Commandant of the Presidio of Monterey and Acting Governor of California.

Thus indeed did our California printing industry start at the top—no less a man that the Governor brought into being!

It wasn't long before Zamorano now possessed of a press, established the private firm of Augustin V. Zamorano & Co. at Monterey. His first and most lucrative customer was — you guessed it—the Territory of California.

It wasn't long before the Zamorano concern turned out gov-

School Safety Patrol Assumes Duties

"Walk, Don't Run," will be the safety theme for all our school children in California this year. To assure the hundreds of students at the Lemon Grove District Schools safe passage across our busy thoroughfares, as they walk to and from classes, red-sweatered traffic patrolmen from grades five through eight will again act as guardians at crosswalks near the schools.

Junior Traffic Patrol, the name by which these grade-school policemen have long been known, has been changed by decree of the State Legislature, and will henceforth be known as the School Safety Patrol. All signs and equipment of the Patrol will be changed to fit the new name.

Full co-operation with the School Safety Patrol is expected and demanded of all students. It is hoped that the adult world will give them equal attention and respect as they discharge their very necessary duty of protecting the lives of our youth. Members of the Patrol will be announced soon.

Observe School Zone Safety Laws

The beginning of the new school term brings an appeal to motorists to drive carefully when in the vicinity of schools. Each driver faces an added responsibility in safe driving, because thousands of youngsters will be going to and returning from schools in our community. It is the duty of every motorist to drive carefully and safely in order to protect the lives and limbs of these boys and girls.

Motorists also might do well to take into consideration another factor provided to safeguard these youngsters. That is the new school bus law. All should be aware of the fact that the law requires vehicles to come to a halt when approaching a school bus from either direction when it is in the act of loading or unloading school children. After a complete stop, the vehicle may proceed at a maximum speed of 15 miles per hour.

By driving carefully, obeying members of the School Safety Patrols, and by observing all traffic rules and regulations, we can prevent uncalled-for accidents to the youth of our community.

Home Tutoring

A special service of the schools is the home tutoring of those children who, because of long illness or some other physical handicap, are unable to attend regular classes. Mrs. Louise Beale, who has served as the home tutor in Lemon Grove School District for some ttime, may be contacted through the principals in Lemon Grove, Monterey Heights, the Junior High or Vista La Mesa.

NEW CIRCULAR OUT

"Trennds and Outlook in the California Grape Industries," a new circular published by the University of Californina College of Agriculture, is now available at Farm Advisor offices, says Farm Advisor E. C. Moore.

The Experiment Station's circular is an economic study by George L. Mehren and S. W. Shear of the Giannini Foundation. It is of main interest to growers and processors of table, raisin and wine grapes. It reveals basic trends in output, prices, costs, income, utilization and distribution over a thirty year period. It shows the major causes of these trends.

This publication may be secured from the Agricultural Extension Service in San Diego County, recently moved to Building No. 1, County Operations Center, 4005 Rosecrans St., San Diego 10. Telephone number has been changed to Woodcrest 3186.

CAN SECURE FREE CALF VACCINATION

Free vaccination of calves for brucellosis is available to California ranchers, states Dr. Kenneth G. McKay, extension veterinarian in agricultural extension of the University of California at Berkeley. Veterinarians are paid 75 cents by the state for each calf vaccinated. In addition, the vaccine is furnished to the veterinarians by the State Department of Agriculture.

As the result of the free service, brucellosis, or Bangs disease, is gradualllly diminishing in California. Much of the credit goes to the Strain 19 vaccine used, believes Dr. McKay.

Strain 19 vaccine is given to calves six to 12 months of age in the program conducted by the California Department of Agriculture. The vaccine helps the calves build up immunity to the disease so that they have resistance to it when mature.

State law requires vaccination of all female dairy calves and for optional vaccination of beef calves at the request of owners. A tatto in the left ear identifies each vaccinated calf.

More and more ranchers are making use of the free service. The program is aimed at reaching 100 percent of the eligible calves, emphasizes Dr. McKay.

SMOKED MEAT MORE FLAVORABLE

Looking for something different in the taste of pork chops, lamb chops, or fried chicken?

Consumers may soon have the choice of trying common meats with a wild smoked flavor. Laboratory tests on the Berkeley campus of the University of California have been very satisfactory, according to Dr. W. V. Cruess, professor of food technology.

Fresh steak, lamb chops, chicken cut for frying, hamurger, filet of sole, and salmon steak were smoked lightly in smoke from oak sawdust and oak shavings in a homemade smoke box. The treatment resulted in no drying action.

Such lightly smoked meats are not like salt or brine cured meats. They would be merely novelties for the family table or specialties in public eating places.

In addition, Dr. Cruess states that light smoking of fresh pork products, hamburger, and lamb

MEAT PRODUCTION IN CALIFORNIA

Even though livestock numbers in California have moved up during the past 50 years, the percentage of meat produced outside the state but consumed here has increased steadily, Farm Advisor Fred W. Dorman, of the University of California Agricultural Extension Service in San Diego County, points out that livestock on farms has moved upward about 20 percent, but that at the same time population has shot up by 600 percent.

Economists estimate that 60 percent of the beef, 80 percent of the pork, and 40 percent of the lamb consumed in California is produced outside the state. Most of the shipments of sheep and lambs and all of the hogs sent into the state are for immediate slaughter.

PLANT IRRIGATED PASTURES SOON

Fall is a better time than spring for planting irrigated pastures, Farm Advisor Fred W. Dorman, of the University of California Agricultural Extension Service points out such pasture requires little labor but produces nutritious and palatable feed for livestock. Such a feed is important in the economical production of milk, and of swine, beef cattle, and sheep.

Irrigated pasture will grow on a wide range of soils, and is well adapted to shallow or heavy soils not suited to many deep-rooted crops. The main essential is plenty of water in frequent irrigations every 7 to 10 days in hot weather such as many parts of the state have experienced recently. Total water requirements vary by locality, perhaps averaging 42 to 54 inches per acre in 16 to 20 irrigations.

According to Arthur Shultis, extension economist of the College of Agriculture, pasturage yields are shown in animal unit months, this being the quantity of feed required in one month by one mature head of cattle, or the equivalent in other stock. A good commercial production would amount to 14 animal units months per acre, most of which would come from March through October.

Desirable pasture seed mixtures vary, so individual ranchers are urged to consult their local Agricultural Extension Service Office, recently moved to Building No. 1, County Operations Center, 4005 Rosecrans street, San Diego 10.

Night Driving Is Hazardous

"You bet your life when you fail to slow down at sundown," the California Highway Patrol warned motorists today.

Pointing out that night driving is more than three times as dangerous as daylight motoring, the Patrol admonished drivers to regulate their speed with safety and common sense.

"Don't over-ride your headlamps," the Patrol urged. "Be sure you can stop within the distance you can see ahead—and that is shorter than you think."

No man can possibly improve in any company for which he has not respect enough to be under some degree of restraint.—Lord Chesterfield.

A good man is the best friend, and therefore soonest to be chosen, longer to be retained; and indeed, never to be parted with. —Jeremy Taylor.

Life in the Old Liberties Yet; Lets Prove That to the World

By BILLY ROSE

Hon. Harry S. Truman
The White House
Washington, D.C.

Dear Mr. President:

I see by the papers that the Freedom Fair which was scheduled to open in Washington in 1951 has been called off. I respectfully suggest that you press a few buttons and call it back on again, and with your patience and permission I'd like to tell you why.

As this lopsided eight-ball of a planet currently shapes up, about the only thing worth talking about is freedom, or the lack of it, and as you yourself have repeatedly pointed out in your speeches, our people ought to know what they're talking about when the subject comes up.

Well, what's the best way to demonstrate that there's still plenty of life in the old liberties? Fastidious facts and figures? Cliche'-studded press releases? Rah-rah-rah editorials? No, Mr. President, not in this day and age. As I see it, the best way to stand off the sugar-coated strychnine being handed out by the kids in the Kremlin is to hand out a few lollypops of our own, and I can't think of a better place to do it than a 200-acre fairground within eyeshot of the Lincoln Memorial.

Billy Rose

Impact-wise, what would such a shindig actually accomplish? Not much, Sir, if it were just a run-of-the-Flushing-meadows type of fair. But it would do a potent plenty if it were a mammoth, bit-'em-in-all-five-senses whooptydo in which everything from spectacle to side-show were built around one simple theme: The Freer the Enterprise, the More Enterprising the Freemen.

ONCE AND FOR ALL, let's concretize in terms of daily living and loving how well our Joe Doakses are doing compared with the Josef Dokczes in the Iron Curtain countries.

For example, in the exhibit area let our big auto outfits trot out their cars alongside a few Russian cars, and then let them dramatize how many man-hours of work it takes to make one—and, even more important, own one. And alongside the big General Motors building, let's have an even bigger U. A. W. building in which Walter Reuther can dramatically document how much better off his men are in terms of union contracts, working conditions and pension plans than the auto workers in the various Commielands.

Once and for all, let's pull out all the stops and compare our homes, schools and churches with theirs. Let's exhibit an American voting booth with a curtain on the door, and next to it a Russian voting booth with an N.K.V.D. man where the curtain ought to be.

In short, let's give the Pinkes the lumps they've been asking for and make it clear as the nose on Jimmy Durante's face that there's no freedom unless everybody can exercise his taste and tensils as he sees fit.

Let's even show them up on the midway. Instead of the usual Chamber of Horrors, let's restage the trial of Cardinal Mindszenty, and instead of the old-hat Ubangi sideshow, let the populace take a peek at a Siberian slave labor camp.

WITH NO POMP but plenty of documented circumstance, one big lesson is a cinch to emerge from the fair I envision: That "degenerate democracy" still provides the bestest for the mostest; that our way of life has got what it takes, and it would be downright silly to let the Commies take what we've got.

Of course, Mr. President, there isn't a chance of getting such a fair on by next year, but if the right words were dropped into the right ears pronto, there's no reason why the grand opening couldn't be set for '52. And, according to my astrologist, that would be an auspicious year for a fair, seeing as how around that time a certain party will be doing its darnedest to convince the voters that it has a special talent for making democracy work.

If you think well enough of this notion to get behind it, Sir, I'll be glad to pitch in and help—whether it's making policy or pink lemonade. Of course, I wouldn't do it for free. My fee would have to be the same as I'm getting as advisory director to the California World Progress Exposition which will be held in San Diego in '53—a one-pound can of good smoking tobacco.

Respectfully,
Billy Rose

SHORT STORY

"Doing Better"

By Richard Hill Wilkinson

LAURIE, Sam Edgewater's pretty daughter, brought in the news.

"There's a nester squatting in our lower range," she said. "He's building himself a home, and when I told him to pack up and get out he laughed at me. More than that he was rude and insulting!"

3-Minute Fiction

Sam Edgewater took one look into his daughter's angry eyes and sent for Tex Tremont and Chuck Wellington. Tex and Chuck had worked for him for 20 years.

Sam explained briefly what Laurie had said, and added, "We'll ride down and warn him off. No violence this first trip. But we'll make it clear he ain't going to be allowed to stay. This here's my land by right of settlin' it."

En route to the lower range Sam fell to wondering how it was that the nester had proved insulting.

A young man was hewing logs in a clearing when the trio rode up. He drove his axe into a tree trunk and looked up at them, smiling pleasantly.

"Howdy gents," he said. "Climb down and squat awhile."

"Never mind the formalities, mister. I'm Sam Edgewater and I own this property. We don't tolerate nesters."

"They told me I could come down here and pick myself a home. It'd be mine if I improved it some. And I aim to improve it."

"This here's been my property for 20 years. It's mine by right of conquest," Sam roared.

The redhead grinned. "Well, if you got papers to prove it's yours, I suppose I'll have to get off. Otherwise, I'm staying."

Sam's face grew purple. He turned to Chuck and Tex. "Boys, you forget what I said about warnin' this jigger. We're gonna have a showdown right now. Kick him out!"

None of them saw the redhead move, but suddenly he had a gun in his hand. It exploded and Tex was staring down at his shattered wrist.

The redhead wasn't grinning. He looked at Chuck. "Well, mister, I guess you're Edgewater's hired gunman too. How about it, want to try earnin' your pay?"

Chuck looked mad but helpless. He wasn't a fool. Sam recovered after a moment from the shock of what had happened. He ordered his men back on their horses. "O. K." he said. "You win this play, Red, but we'll be back."

"Yeah," jeered the redhead. "Next time bring a dozen with you."

EIGHT DAYS later Sam rode down to the lower range at the head of seven grim-faced punchers.

"Son," said Sam Edgewater, "we don't want to hurt you none, but we aim to kick you off this land. You must have sense enough to realize you ain't got a chance, playing a lone hand."

The redhead wasn't grinning. None of them saw him move but suddenly he had a gun in his hand.

The redhead grinned. "The government," he said, "allowed I could have this here land. However, you look to me like a square shooter, so I'll make you a square proposition. I'll take on any three of your heroes single handed—and agree not to marry your daughter if they beat me."

"Agree not to what!" Sam bellowed.

The redhead looked surprised. "Shucks," he said, "I thought Laurie had told you we were fixin' to get married. You see, I kissed her the first day she come down here and that sort of settled things—"

"Laurie! Is what this young whippersnapper says, true? Is it?"

Laurie looked at the young whippersnapper, then at her father. "He did kiss me that first day I came down," she said.

Sam stared at her and swore under his breath. After a moment he turned his horse and galloped away, and the punchers galloped after him. Laurie confronted the redhead and her eyes were angry.

"That," she said, "was about the most—the most—" Her expression softened, because Red was grinning. The most unromantic way of proposing," she finished.

"I can do better," said Red. "Want me to?"

Laurie didn't answer. She didn't have to.

ERROR IN THE GOLDFISH BOWL

"Uneasy lies the head that wears the crown," moaned Shakespeare's Henry IV — and uneasy must be the political leader who reflects, as all such men must reflect occasionally, that fickle fortune may be affected by a single ill-advised statement, or even a mere slip of the tongue.

Back in 1920, Thomas R. Marshall, then Vice-President of the United States, wisecracked that "What this countnry needs is a good five-cent cigar." Mr. Marshall got a national laugh for his sally—but it killed all hope he may have had of advancing to the White House. The peoople just cooudn't take him seriously, as a statesman with a responsible approach to public affairs, after that. Just a slip of the tongue—but he was through.

Students of political history say that a potent factor in the defeat of Alfred E. Smith in his colorful campaign for the Presidency in 1928 was his pronunciation of radio as raddio. Smith was an able and ernest man; he would have made a capable President. But many among the millions who heard him over the air somehow felt that the dignity of the exalted office he sought would have been impaired by an occupant afflicted with Al's Eastside New York accent.

Men in high office have the privacy of a goldfish in his bowl. In all that they say and do, they are constantly before the public—are actors who may never leave the stage for an instant until the play is over. President Truman has had uncomfortable evidence of this in the nation-wide storm of protest against his statement that the Marine Corps has a "propaganda machine that is almost equal to Stalin's."

Mr. Truman has a penchant for making hasty and hurtful comment on the spur of the moment, and has made a good many mistakes in the past. Yet his bombshell of opprobrium, more than anything else, might well become his bar to another term in the White House. Mr. Truman's hurried and abject apology to the Marine Corps strongly indicates his own apprehension in this respect. But the serious damage has been done. The politician who wants to stay in the game just can't afford to make such errors in the goldfish bowl.

MALIK'S WARNING

Stalin's mouthpiece, Jacob Malik, has given clear warning that all American leaders, civil and military, will be shot if war comes and Russia wins. Pointedly, Malik calls U. S. action in Korea "criminal." He says the shooting down of a Soviet plane that attacked a U. N. fleet was "criminal." Everyone knows what the Russians do with "criminals." Next thing every American will be a criminal to Stalin. We know one thing in this uncertain world: Americans must hang together for victory—or be shot together in defeat. The Malik warning is unmistakable.

MR. PEPPER'S COMMON MAN

Senator Claude Pepper, who is soon to retire to private life by command of the voters of Florida, has made a discovery. He disclosed it in a speech at a labor convention, stating that many newspapers are "trying to prejudice the public against the common man."

Mr. Pepper's reasoning is a bit difficult to follow. The public includes everybody. Since the public cannot, even by political lame duck logic, be prejudiced against itself, just who is Mr. Pepper's common man whom the "public" is influenced against? He must be a rare bird among us, if not wholly extinct. However, Mr. Pepper goes on to clear up one point.

He says the newspapers of his State prejudiced the public against himself, and so contributed to his defeat. So it's Mr. Pepper who is the "common man" (if one can follow his logic at all); and so it turns out that it was the "uncommon" men of Florida who voted to dispense with his brand of statesmanship until further notice, if any.

Great pressures and influences have been brought to bear in this country of ours to create a class of "common men"—create a veritable American proletariat of the "masses," ever since the New Deal proclaimed itself the champion of the "forgotten man." The Bill of Rights, and not any man in the President's chair, or anywhere else in government has made the United States of America the land of the independent, truly uncommon man. It is he who creates such things as senators—and lame ducks.

Political Parade

CLEM WHITAKER, Jr.

Ah, Democracy! The decision of the rank and file! Honest platforms openly arrived at by strict adherence to party rules!

That's the story of "The Boys In Room 1106." It's the story told by Dr. R. B. Robins, Democratic National Committeeman from Arkansas, and printed in Medical Economics.

"Meeting at midnight last May 15 in a small room of the the Hotel Stevens, Chicago, a doubtful quorum of Democratic National Committee members pulled a fast one on the rank and file," Dr. Robins opens.

"They adopted in the party's name a resolution 'reaffirming' the 1948 Democratic platform," but containing a joker. "In order to avoid socialized medicine," the high brass handful stated, "we (the Democratic Party) endorse the President's program" for compulsory health insurance!

Neat? That's just the beginning. In the first place the committee's action was unauthorized. Dr. Robins points out that "The Democratic Party Rule Book clearly states: 'The duties and powers of the national committee are derived from the convention, and no convention has authorized the formulation of proposals which might be construed to be in the nature of platform declarations'." The book continues: "The Democratic National Committee has no authority expressed or implied, to prescribe issues for the Democratic rank and file."

Another small item. The 1948 Democratic platform, which The Boys in Room 1106 supposedly were "reaffirming," didn't mention compulsory health insurance.

Don't think for a moment, however, that The Boys in 1106 just couldn't find anybody to attend the meeting—or that their decision was a spur of the moment gesture. "Some weeks before the committee met" Dr. Robins reveals, "it printed and began distributing (at party expense) 200,000 copies of a booklet" extolling the virtues of compulsory health insurance. This "despite the absence of compulsory health insurance plank in the party platform." The booklet carried the imprint of the national committee.

It is interesting to note, too, Dr. Robins points out, that the Chicago meeting was called ostensibly as a National Democratic Conference and Jefferson Jubilee. "General sessions were scheduled for Saturday, May 13 and Monday evening, May, 5 (at Soldier's Field)." As to the midnight meeting in Room 1106 of the Stevens, Dr. Robins states: "It is now clear that a handful of committee brass in Washington had . . . decided for the committee as a whole that it would go down the line, for sompulsory health insurance.

And that's the story of "The Boys In Room 1106"—the story of how the Democratic Party was tagged with being on record for compulsory health insurance.

He who asks gets. Do you ask Lemon Grove for its trade?

"Good luck, Mr. Nixon!"

The great, great granddaughter of General Mariano Vallejo, first governor of California, pins a good luck charm on her favorite candidate.

Youngest among the "Women for Nixon" boosters, at a recent overflow meeting in San Francisco, attended by prominent women from many Northern California counties, was Miss Tica Francisca Vallejo McGettigan, 2nd., aged 9, of 2722 Baker street, San Francisco. Bearer of an illustrious name and a charming smile, the great, great granddaughter of California's first governor takes an active interest in state and national affairs. Above she is shown pinning one of her favorite good luck charms on her favorite candidate for the U. S. Senate, Representative Richard M. Nixon.

FROM THE NEWS CIRCUIT

JAMES DORAIS

There is an old superstition that a person who saves another's life is henceforth responsible for his welfare.

Uncle Sam, in recent years, has assumed the role of economic lifesaver to an increasing number of his nephews and nieces. Through his various departments, bureaus and agencies, he gives advice, administers plans, grants financial assistance and generally takes responsibility for the welfare of an ever-widening circle of groups and individuals.

It would naturally follow that if Uncle Sam falls down on the job, he should be taken to task.

That, at least, is the way Henry J. Krueger of Elgin, Illinois figures it.

Mr. Krueger is a mink rancher. He is suing the U. S. Department of Agriculture for $55,591 because the Department failed to give him proper advice. As a result of that failure, Mr. Krueger claims his female minks produced only 85 kittens this year when he expected 1400.

The preferred food for minks, it seems, is horse meat. Several seasons ago, when horse meat became scarce, the Department of Agriculture recommended feeding minks chicken heads instead.

Minks thrived on the new diet—for a while. Then a sinister note entered the situation with the commercial introduction of stilbestrol, a female harmone drug used as caponizing agent in the heads of chickens. Caponized chickens grew fat in a hurry but when their heads were removed and fed to the minks, the effects were disastrous. The minks, according to Mr. Krueger and 33 other mink breeders who are backing him in his suit, became sterile.

The Department of Agriculture, Mr. Krueger charges, should have warned him. After all, they recommended the use of chicken heads in the first place.

So far, the Department has refused to take responsibility for the estimated 1315 kittens that failed to show up on schedule at Mr. Krueger's ranch, although it since advised mink breeders to abandon chicken heads as food.

Mr. Krueger and his fellow mink breeders, however, intend to pursue the suit. They feel that when Uncle Sam undertakes to look after the welfare of mink breeders, he should keep everlastingly at it. It's not right, they maintain, for the government to point with pride to all the good it accomplishes unless it is willing to assume responsibility for the mink it sterilizes along the way.

If the Krueger suit is successful, heaven only knows what it will lead to.

Washington Report

By CONG. RICHARD NIXON

It is essential during these perilous times that the American people have confidence in their leaders, particularly those who formulate and administer our foreign policy. Such confidence in Dean Acheson as Secretary of State is now virtually nonexistent and I therefore believe he should be replaced, in the national interest, by a new man who will command the respect of the great majority of Americans.

Up to the present time, I have not been among those who have urged Mr. Acheson's resignation, nor do I go along with those who question his loyalty. But today the Secretary of State, because of the failure of the State Department policy in Asia, a policy which he defended and which led to the Korean conflict, has lost the faith of the people in his ability to handle our international relationships with any assurance of ultimate world peace. Right now, if a vote were taken in the House of Representatives as to whether Dean Acheson should be retained as Secretary of State, I doubt that as many as 100 of the 435 members would support him. That, of course, means that a great many members of his own political party would oppose him.

The dilema in which we now find ourselves is chargeable, to an extent, to our military weakness. But our major error was made when we adopted one policy in Europe and another policy in Asia in our fight against communism. We told the nations of Europe, correctly, that they could not have our Marshall plan aid unless they kept communists out of their governments. But we told China she could not have our help unless she took the communists into the government. To the average American, that is plain double-talk, and the average American places little confidence in those who practice double-talk.

Unless and until our foreign policy is made by men who recognize that communism is a threat to the security of American lives wherever it exists, whether in Europe, Asia or anywhere else, the people of the United States will have no confidence in their policymakers.

We are being prepared for the necessity of making great economic sacrifices today to successfully combat the world conquest aims of communism. The least that can be done by their Government to assure their cooperation in this endeavor is to give the American people leadership which holds the promise that previous mistakes will not be repeated, mistakes that will make it necessary for the people to make the same sacrifice two or three times every generation.

In taking the position that Secretary Acheson should be replaced, I have not overlooked the role that could be played by him at the diplomatic table in the event of an end to the Korean hostilities while he remained in office. His past policy mistakes carry the threats that some post-Korea conference might result in such decisions as were made at Yalta and Potsdam, of which we are now reaping the consequences. It was at Yalta, for example, that Manchuria was given to Soviet Russia, and it was at Potsdam that it was agreed to divide Korea at the 38th parallel.

We are challenged with the necessity of not only winning the limited war in Korea, but of finding the leadership to safely direct our destiny beyond that point. Twice within our generation, the United States has engaged in a world war and has emerged victorious. Twice we have lost the peace after the war was won. Now we are engaged in a third war and we are presented with a third opportunity to win the peace. We have been up twice and we have struck out twice. Now we must send up a batter who can score a clean hit, because if we strike out this time it will mean the end of civilization as we know it.

School Workshop for Teachers

During the week of September 5 through September 8, the entire teaching and administrative staff of Lemon Grove School District attended a pre-school workshop, which is held annually just prior to opening of regular school sessions in the fall. The workshop had a four-fold purpose: (1) to acquaint returning personnel with new members of the teaching staff; (2) to familiarize teachers with the overall district plans; (3) to provide ample time for area meetings; (4) to permit sufficient time for classroom preparation.

On Tuesday morning, a general meeting, with Byron L. Netley and S. K. Solleder as co-chairmen, was held in the school cafeteria. Mrs. Ada Krimsky, music supervisor, led group singing to open the program. Principals of all schools then introduced new members of their staffs to the assembly.

Mr. Netzley explained that double sessions would be continued in the district, despite the bonds voted last November by our citizens, because there is an additional number of children enrolled but there are no additional classrooms for them. The district's application, third received, is now forty-fourth on the list for consideration in Sacramento. By spring we shall be eligible for allocation, although an emergency exists here at the present time. A special session of the state legislature may be called to correct the inadequacies of the present bill. This would make the remainder of the $250,000,000 available immediately, provide for furniture funds, and make allocations as soon as applications are approved. All this will help provide the additional 31 classrooms so needed in the district.

Mr. Netzley also reported on the administrators' workshop, and Mr. Solleder, director of education, spoke briefly to the staff concerning the over-all plans for the first semester.

After a brief intermission at 10:30, the group heard teacher reports given by Mrs. Helen Thompson, member of the Teacher Association Curriculum Committee; Mrs. Jessie Snell, member of the San Diego County Curriculum Planning Committee; Mrs. Emma M. Tait, local representative to the Prescott Child Study Group; Mrs. Virginia Cornelius, local audio-visual aid chairman; and Mrs. Ada Krimsky, director of classroom music.

A delicious hot lunch was served to the group by Mrs. Pfister and Mrs. Perkins, of the Lemon Grove School cafeteria.

In the afternoon, new members of the teaching staff met with members of the secretarial staff for instructions on the keeping of state registers, while other teachers began organizing materials in classrooms.

Wednesday morning, after a brief general meeting, during which teacher handbooks were distributed, the new teachers toured the Schools Service Center in San Diego, becoming acquainted with the many materials and services available to county schools. Area meetings were held at the Lemon Grove School throughout the afternoon, where discussions were held on problems pertinent to each group. These groups in turn broke into smaller committees for the purpose of developing phases of the curriculum.

These same area meetings were conducted Thursday morning in the three schools in the district. In the afternoon, former teachers were again given an opportunity to work in classrooms, while new personnel toured the entire district, visiting each school.

Following building meetings Friday morning, the P.T.A, Executive Boards of Lemon Grove, Vista La Mesa and Monterey Heights met in their respective schools with the teachers. All teachers were given an opportunity after the meeting to meet and talk with the room mothers selected for this school year. The room mothers have given invaluable service to the schools during past years, and they shall continue to work with the classroom teachers this year for the betterment of our schools.

At a general meeting of the teachers and administrators on Friday afternoon, S. K. Solleder introduced Mrs. Hazel Schwalm, new president of the Lemon Grove District Teachers Association, who conducted a brief meeting of the association.

It was felt by all those attending the various sessions of the workshop that all purposes were fulfilled. The framework established during this week will support all efforts of both the administration and teaching staff throughout the school year.

Girl Scout News

Members of the Vista La Mesa Neighborhood Club planned fall activities for the group at their meeting Tuesday afternoon. The ladies scheduled an orientation program for all Scout leaders and persons interested in Scouting. Mrs. Lucy Young will preside over this session which will be held next Thursday at 1:30 in the First Christian Church. Child care will be provided.

Mrs. H. M. Fisher, chairman of the club, announced the twelfth Regional Scout Convention to be held November 7, 8 and 9 at Riverside. It is open to any adult interested in the work of Girl Scout organization. Anyone wishing to attend this convention should contact the Girl Scout House, Pepper Grove, Balboa Park.

Before adjournment, Mrs. Fisher introduced two new Brownie leaders, Mrs. G. B. Rendel and Mrs. William Vellner.

At the conclusion of the business meeting refreshments were served to the club members by the hostesses, Mrs. V. E. Marriott and Mrs. Jack Kempner.

Scout Troop 32 will meet next Wednesday, at 12:30, at the home of Mrs. H. M. Fisher. Girls are to bring lunches.

California Centennial

ernment printing almost exclusively. In 1846 he began producing the Californian, the State's first newspaper and later still in the same year The Alta Californian, following removal of the press to Yerba Buena, now called San Francisco.

It must be remembered that in those early days most of the development of California, both culturally and industrially, occurred perforce in the northern regions of the State around San Joaquin Valley and San Francisco Bay. English speaking populations had not yet begun their large-scale settlements in the South.

Secondly, the history of early printing in the Golden State is tied up inextricably with the [illegible] $7,000 zial printing was at that time negligible since there was no widespread industrial growth to demand it.

In the resume that follows I have taken the liberty to quote material gathered and collated by L. A. Ireland, of the Employing Printers Association of San Francisco, who gave a workmanlike outline of our industry's infancy, childhood and coming-of-age in his "The Press In San Francisco." Says Mr. Ireland:

"January of the year 1847 found San Francisco boasting of two newspapers, The Californian and The California Star. But in that year things happened quickly, and on May 29 The Californian announced its "non-issue until better days should come."

"On June 14, 1847, the Star also folded up, announcing that 'every 'sub' and every 'devil' had gone to the 'diggins,' rejecting every offer and effort to retain them.'

"It was in keeping with the times that printing should be done in military surroundings, just as it began in California, and up in Fort Sutter the Placer Times was printed. This paper found considerable favor in the mining camps roundabout, but it had a keen competitor, The Transcript.

"Following a price war—too common among printers even today — in which advertising rates fell far below the cost of setting type, things got so bad that the printers involved quit and decided to start a new paper, the Sacramento Daily Union. Today this is the oldest newspaper west of the Great Divide.

"It was the Union that Mark Twain worked as a special writer under his own name of Samuel Clemens, and there are those in the printing fraternity who claim that Clemens never would have become Mark Twain had it not been for his printing experience in the delightful atmosphere in California.

"In 1885, in San Francisco, the publication of the evening Bulletin was begun and on December 1, 1856, the owners of the Bulletin published the first number of the morning Call, under the management of the "Associated Practical Farmers."

"Then came the Examiner, first published on June 12, 1865, and, as recorded in "Lights and Shades in San Francisco" by B. E. Lloyd, "it is characterized for the chasteness of its contents—nothing whatever of a sensational nature being permitted in its columns." Such was the Examiner of that day! The Evening Post followed with its first number of December 4, 1871.

"There was at this period several daily and weekly foreign language publications, among them the Daily Demokrat, Abend Post, Courier De San Francisco, La Voz De Nuevo Mundo, California Posten, L Voce Del Populo, and La Petite Jurnal.

"Then there was the special interest dailies such as the Stock Report, the Stock Exchange, the Figaro, a theatrical paper, and numerous trade papers, including The Pacific Grocer, The Pacific Rural Press, Californian Farmer, The Mining and Scientific Press, The Spirit of the Times, Underwriters' Journal, and the Journal of Commerce.

"The religious world, too, had its publications, and every important sect contributed in this respect, as did fraternal orders of the day.

"Among the more popular weeklies of the day was The News Letter and California Advertiser which, according to 'Lights and Shades in San Francisco,' was 'at once the friend and enemy of everybody; but, above all else, it heartily abominates 'quackery,' and under a motto of 'skulls and bones' keeps a standing list of all persons who represent themselves as physicians, but are unable to show their diplomas. It is most patronized as an advertising medium and is doubtless the most profitable advertising property in the city.'

"As a printer with the California Chronicle, James K. Moffit is listed in the City Directory of the year 1854, and in 1856, Francis Blake sets up as a printer at 68 Merchant St., and by 1858 "a steam power press" is being operated under the firm name of Blake & Moffitt. Not far away another "steam printer" is doing business under the firm name of Whitten Towne & Co., one James W. Towne being a partner, and it was not long before he became interested in the importing and jobbing of paper. Other names well known today throughout the state appear in the directories of the fifties and the sixties, Frank H. Abbott and Frank Bosqui among them.

"About a hundred distinct publications, the greater number being daily or weekly, but some monthly and quarterly, were being published in the metropolis of California at the beginning of the the seventies. Commenting on this, the author of 'Lights and Shades of San Francisco,' published in 1875, writes as follows:

"The California public look upon the press as a power, whose test; with a sort of reverential awe. To this fact are possibly due to the restrictions that have been attempted to be placed upon it—by the recent State Legislature.

"Yet in the face of this dreaded power and independence, wealthy corporations have grown thrifty and today threaten to rise to their strength and dictate to the masses what they shall or shall not do.

"There has been no country more prolific of monopolies than California, and unless they are held in check by legislation, the oppression that results from tyrannical power when given unbridled sway, will become intolerable.

"The spirit of communism, (sic!) that is occasionally manifest among the laboring classes, is enkindled and fed by the blighting influence the monopolies exert, and will develop into a power that will, by sheer force, estblish an equilibrium, even though a period of anarchy should result, unless some protection be extended to the workingmen.'

"From these beginnings, printing and publishing has grown to be one of the largest industries in the state and one that stands at the very top of all industries in San Francisco and very near the top in metropolitan Los Angeles, where the value of its products is about $50,000,000."

The power of the printing art in our State during the first 100 years of its being cannot be adequately estimated in a few hundred words or many thousand.

What but the press of the East inspire the flood of overland immigrations of Americans that eventually built our West from its mountain-desert-valley foundation into one of the great empires of modern times?

What but the press of the West knitted these newcomers into a commonwealth founded upon the rich products of the earth that lay to the hand of the pioneer in our fertile soils, our mineral veins of silver and gold (and uranium) and our pools of petroleum?

For the press — our whole printing industry—is the one most powerful tool of thought that has had and will continue to have the strength to convey ideas to the minds of men—ideas that will make them as happy and as contented and as hopeful as men can be in these days of portentious change.
